

The Pagan Princesses

Pagan Strong

Written by Jax Garren

Posted by the Pagan Princesses on December 13, 2011

Jax & GG We're not ashamed to admit we're Pagans.

GG But you don't need to worship many gods.

Jax Or one god.

GG Or no god.

Jax To know that there's something right in the country when so many people of diverse faiths can live together, work together, and gather in fellowship without fear.

GG I thank my ancestors for coming to a country where I can live, maybe not without prejudice, but under a government that protects my right to live as I choose and to follow my convictions.

Jax In our religion, Heathenry, Yuletide is the holiest time of year.

GG In fact, Yuletide comes from the old Norse word Jul, spelled J-U-L. In celebrating Yule, we're not twisting Christmas away from its Christian roots. We're celebrating a holiday that was part of our heritage before Christianity came to northern Europe.

Jax Like my ancestors, I love decorating my home with evergreens and gathering with my family to toast the return of the new sun.

GG S-U-N, that is.

Jax We also enjoy celebrating along side so many other religions and so many diverse traditions that are beautiful and powerful. It is a spiritual time of year for so many people.

GG So when we wish you a blessed Yule, we are trying to send you the spirit of the season. And we hope that you celebrate it any way you choose.

Jax We also wish that regardless of your beliefs, that you find after the longest night of the year, a new day brings you a sense of hope and joy. A renewal of spirit and a tightening of bonds between you and your loved ones.

GG Because that's what this holiday is about for everyone.

Jax I'm Jax.

GG And I'm GG.

Jax & GG And we wish you a blessed Yule from the Pagan Princesses.

© The Pagan Princesses 2011, 2012.